

Pre-Conference:

Photo Documentation of Sexual Assault & Domestic Violence Injuries for Sexual Assault Nurse Examiners

Tuesday, December 9, 2014

1:00 pm - 5:00 pm

Registration Fee $25

Space is limited to 40 participants

Approved for CNEs and meets 5 hour requirement for SANEs

Forensic Photography is a critical step in the process of evidence collection. Sexual Assault Nurse Examiners use photography to provide thorough documentation of injuries and the general presentation of the victims they examine. Injuries on the body are among the hardest photographs to take. Human skin and surrounding bruising can easily be washed out with flash photography due to its reflective properties. This lecture and practical exercises, utilizing the Nikon D-90 camera, will provide the student with the proper photography techniques to successfully document injuries of sexual assault and domestic violence.

Photographic techniques that will be identified:

- Understanding and adjusting depth of field
- Approaches to close-up photography
- Lighting techniques

Pre-Conference:

Women's Health

Tuesday, December 9, 2014

10:00 am - 5:00 pm

Registration Fee $50

10 am - 12 pm Trauma-Informed Birth Support for Pregnant Survivors of Abuse Meeting the needs of pregnant survivors requires thoughtful attention. Teaching victim advocates strategies to engage and support pregnant survivors of abuse in meaningful, trauma-informed ways can improve the childbirth experience and related health outcomes, promote bonding between mothers and their newborns, and lead to prevention of future violence and maltreatment.

Presenters

Kenya Fairley, MEd, CD(DONA) As the Senior Director of Capacity Building and Education at the NRC DV, Kenya oversees the technical assistance, training, resource development, and online presence of the National Resource Center on Domestic Violence. Her background is in direct services, child welfare, and leadership development, and she is a practicing doula with experience supporting survivors of abuse.

Bethany (Fern) Gilkerson, MA Fern Gilkerson develops trainings, toolkits, and praxes on health and domestic violence at the Pennsylvania Coalition Against Domestic Violence. She brings experience as an advocate, birth doula, and women's studies instructor and 25 years in social justice and health sciences work.

1 - 3 pm Reproductive Coercion & Intimate Partner Violence Reproductive coercion (RC) occurs frequently in violent relationships and yet is often not recognized or addressed. RC means using threats or acts of violence that affect a partner's reproductive health and decision-making, often leading to increased health risks and trauma for women and adolescent girls. Becoming informed about RC and learning ways to integrate intervention and prevention strategies is critical to providing optimum advocacy and health care to females.

Presenter

Laurie Thompsen, MSW Laurie is the Health and Behavioral Health Coordinator for the West Virginia Coalition Against Domestic Violence (WVCADV). Her activities include extensive training, developing system-specific responses to domestic violence in clinical and non-clinical settings, technical assistance, and other work. Ms. Thompsen is involved with many initiatives, statewide and nationally, that focus on health, behavioral health, and early childhood program responses to domestic violence.

3:15 - 5 pm The STAR Model Exploring effective referral-making for clients facing unintended pregnancies: Did you know that 50% of pregnancies in the United States are unintended? For women experiencing intimate partner violence, the rate is even higher. As advocates and healthcare providers, our clients may come to us needing referrals for healthcare services and social supports related to their pregnancies. Offering non-biased and thorough support can be tricky. In this workshop we will use a research-based model for referral-making that can guide us in supporting our clients across the full range of pregnancy outcomes.

Presenters

Bree Pearsall Bree is the KY State Coordinator for Provide, where she works to increase access to reproductive healthcare across the state. Bree previously worked as a human trafficking outreach advocate as well as a domestic violence advocate in Lexington, KY. She has an MSW from the University of Washington and strives to cultivate an anti-oppressive practice in her work and life.

Fausta Luchini A native of Kentucky, Fausta Luchini is a Licensed Psychological Practitioner with over 15 years experience as a therapist, working with adults and teens, primarily with depression, anxiety, and trauma history. She also offers trainings on cognitive behavioral therapy, compassion satisfaction, and full options pregnancy counseling.
